Presidential election contested; judicial hearing set for tomorrow

by Ann Standaert

Bill Holland, a presidential candidate in Thursday's ASSU elections, has protested the election on the grounds that Omar Khashoggi, a write-in opponent, violated the election code.

Khashoggi, Holland contends in his written protest, violated the code by "circulation of a slanderous accusation stating that I offered him $50 to withdraw from the ASSU race for president."

HOLLAND requested that the presidential election be held invalid and Khashoggi be disqualified as a candidate.

The judicial board will meet to decide the matter at 3 p.m. tomorrow in the Chieftain conference room. The meeting is open to the public.

Holland explained he first heard of the accusation late Wednesday night. He immediately sought out Khashoggi and found him in Xavier.

AFTER A brief argument on the third floor, Holland and Khashoggi went to the lobby to discuss the matter.

"I told him 'Omar, I just want to ask you, have you been telling people I offered you $50 to get out of the race,'" Holland said.

"He answered 'yes' so I asked him 'why' and he said 'Because it's true,'" Holland added.

THURSDAY, an informal meeting was held between Fr. Leonard Sitter, S. J., director of student services, Holland, Khashoggi and representatives of the ASSU.

Khashoggi explained during the meeting that he took the alleged bribe as a joke and had only told two people. The rumor spread from there, he said.

"I feel that there is nothing that could possibly be gained by any further comment on what has turned out to be a very unfortunate incident in both our lives," Khashoggi told The Spectator yesterday.

"THE TWO of us have been hurt. I think it best if we allow the memory of this incident to fade because to do anything else would inevitably lead to more misunderstanding and pain.

"I do not think that anything can be gained by voicing countercharges. I am able to say with a clear conscience that I have been honest with myself and all involved throughout the entire election," he continued.

Holland expressed his disappointment and disenchantment Sunday.

"WHAT'S AT stake now is my integrity. I can't let it drop because that would be to admit guilt and I'm not guilty," Holland added.

In addition to the protest, Holland also asked a recount be held because of the closeness of the race. Harold Nelson, the third opponent, bested Holland 253 to 247. Khashoggi had 136 votes.

Final ASSU election results out

The final results of the ASSU elections have been released, but the outcome of one race is being contested.

As it stands right now, Harold Nelson took the office of president. That race is the one being questioned. Nelson accumulated 253 votes as opposed to 247 brought in by Bill Holland and 136 attributed to write-in Omar Khashoggi.

IN THE RUN for first vice president, Larry Brouse came out on top with 326 votes while Mark Molina tallied 244.

Write-in Greg Camden captured the office of second vice president with a total of 211. Allen Lee claimed 204 and Ron Bennett had 136 votes.

Ken Barroga beat Tim Sullivan for the position of treasurer by a 327-274 margin.

Running unopposed, Jan Flom raked in 440 nods of approval in her bid for ASSU secretary.

IN THE BATTLE for senate position five, Brad Maroni had a 264-260 edge over Tracy Call. Mike Kelly made an overwhelming showing in the contest for position six. He collected 311 votes as compared to the 221 given to Pat O'Carroll.

Mary Ann Cummins grabbed senate seat seven with a 327-170 victory over Don Ward.

Dave Leppla came out ahead of Rosemarie Ferri in the contention for senate seat eight with a 309-222 win.

A constitutional amendment lowering the credit requirements for the office of president from 75 to 35 failed to pass by a 194-343 margin.

State Senate passes drinking bill

Ready to tip a few after finals next quarter?

Well, if all goes right, that's what all 19 and 20 year-olds will have the opportunity to do come the early part of June.

The state Senate passed the 19-year-old drinking bill Thursday and chances are excellent that Gov. Dan Evans will sign the bill into law any day now according to one of the governor's aides.

THERE MAY be a hassle getting another portion of the measure approved, however. That portion deals with allowing 18-year-olds to work in Class H restaurants—working, but not drinking.

At any rate, the bill, which started out with 18-year-olds in mind, ended up as a favorable compromise at 19.

If all goes well, the fetters on all 19 and 20-year-olds will be broken within 60-90 days after Gov. Evans signs the measure. That makes it June, with a long hot summer to follow.

Pheasant new head of university relations

Pat Pheasant

Patrick E. Pheasant is the new vice president for university relations, the Very Rev. Louis Gaffney, S.J., University president, announced Friday.

PHEASANT was formerly the University's director of development. He was appointed to that position last year.

His new position is "responsible for all activities in the area of university relations, public relations, publicity, special events, development programs including fund raising and all recruiting activities of the admissions department," Fr.

Gaffney said in his announcement.

Pheasant is a 1963 University graduate in marketing. He is also the second lay alumnus to become a vice president of the University and the fourth layman to be a vice president of the University.

DR. WILLIAM A. Guppy, a 1950 graduate and professor of psychology, is academic vice president; William C. Adkisson is vice president for finance and business; and Fr. Timothy F. Cronin, S.J., is vice president for students.

Fr. Gaffney: Raises depend on enrollment

Faculty salary raises for next year will be contingent on the fall enrollment figures, the Very Rev. Louis Gaffney, S.J., University president, announced at the winter quarter faculty meeting Friday.

The budget, Fr. Gaffney explained, already has a $45,000 deficit with no salary increase calculated. The University would need about $60,000 more than that, or $105,000, for an average raise of three per cent, he added.

THE UNIVERSITY plans to offer contracts in March with no increase attached, he said. Next fall, after the total number of students has been calculated, the decision will be made whether or not to offer raises, retroactive to Sept. 16, Fr. Gaffney added.

The budget is "based on the cautious projection of being down 105 students," Fr. Gaffney said. Twenty-seven extra students would fill the deficit; 36 more would bring in enough for faculty raises, he pointed out.

"If all of us can recruit one additional student or retain a single student, the job will be done and the budget taken care of," Fr. Gaffney said.

DECLINING enrollment continues to be the University's single greatest problem, he said. Until enrollment is stabilized, "fiscal planning is impossible," the president pointed out.

The competition, he added, faces the same problem. Almost all public institutions are below their projected enrollment, Fr. Gaffney said.

To solve the problem, Fr. Gaffney asked the faculty "to work together to sell ourselves."

TEAMWORK IN the areas of recruiting, public relations, alumni and development are needed, he said.

To this end, Pat Pheasant, former director of development, was appointed new vice president for university relations, Fr. Gaffney announced.

Pheasant will take on the job of coordinating the four areas, he said. (See story this page.)

Ken Rose, new admissions director, re-emphasized the idea of faculty participation in recruiting and retention efforts.

"IT IS NO longer possible for five people in the admissions office to do all the recruiting. We're only as good as the staff and faculty," Rose said.

Retention, Rose added, is the big thing.

"Several studies show that most universities could care less about the student," he said.

If S.U. could add a personal touch, the University would gain, he added.

ROSE BROUGHT up the possibility of an "orientation" for graduates to give them an idea of what to expect in the "business world" after graduation.

In recruiting areas, the admissions office, Rose said, has visited 396 high schools since September. A total of 1377 seniors and 410 juniors have filled out forms indicating their interest in S.U.

In addition, 411 students have been admitted as freshmen and 66 as transfers next fall, he said.

ROSE ENCOURAGED the faculty to "be imaginative" in thinking of ways of bringing students on campus.

The meeting ended with a discussion of the 4-1-4 proposal, a plan to change the academic calendar into divisions of four months, one month and four months.

Fr. James Powers, S.J., English, argued for the proposal while Fr. Francis Woods, S.J., engineering, and Fr. Eugene Healy, S.J., biology, argued against it. (See story page 4.)

Lent begins tomorrow; fasting, Masses planned

Lent begins tomorrow.

A Penance Service will be held at 8 p.m. today in the Liturgical Center to inaugurate the season of Lent.

During the service, there will be time for individual confessions. Tomorrow, Ash Wednesday, is a day of fast and abstinence for Catholics.

Ashes will be distributed at the 11:10 a.m. and 12:10 p.m. Masses in Bellarmine Chapel and at the 12:10 and 4:30 p.m. Masses in the Liturgical Center.

All students, faculty, administration and staff are invited to attend the main service at 4:30 p.m. in the Center.

Catholics in the Seattle Archdiocese are requested by the Archbishop to abstain from meat on Fridays of Lent.

letters to editor

why?

To the editor:

It's come to my attention that Speech 491, Interpersonal Communication, may not be offered spring quarter because no one is signing up for it.

It's a class that I took this quarter and found very exciting and interesting. Speech 491 is relevant to everyone and can assist anyone in their daily life.

In an age when people are grousing about people not understanding one another, it's beyond me why people ignore a class like Speech 491.

Here's a chance to do something about the problem and people are passing it up. Why?

misconception

To the editor:

We would like to correct a misconception in your latest editorial. Minority Affairs Office did not sign up any candidates for the student body elections. Minority Affairs did encourage a number of people to participate in the election, which they had every right to do.

AT THIS TIME it appears that there are apparent discrepancies between what the students at S.U. mouth and what they actually feel.

This primary election only served to point up the latent racism which permeates much of the thinking of this school's student body and faculty.

Much criticism has been rendered to minority students because they did not participate in school functions, but now, when they offered a challenge for the "sacred cow" ASSU student body offices, we have the present situation—yellow journalism with little if any checking of fact, an assault on the credentials of the Minority Affairs Office, and worse yet, a discrediting of every minority student on the slate.

SHODDY, but expected.

The Office of Minority Affairs

Editor's note: The information we had was from the candidates themselves who said they were nominated for the posts "by the Minority Affairs office."

After some serious thought, I admit that I probably made a mistake in not contacting the office but my point in the editorial is still valid.

I do not question the candidates' right to run for office but rather the manner in which they signed up. These candidates obviously did not sign themselves up, as is required in the election code.

What kind of leaders can't take that kind of initiative?

Credit Union meeting set

The annual meeting of the Credit Union will be at 8 p.m. next Tuesday in the A. A. Lemieux Library Auditorium.

The meeting is open to all University faculty, staff, students and alumni (of one or more quarters).

Short reports will be made by officers and committee chairmen.

Elections are scheduled, also, for the positions of directors and committeemen. The present terms expire at this meeting.

rather childish

To the editor:

Re: the insulted mother, the rebuttal to the insulted mother and the rebuttal to the rebuttal:

Shannon Cain wrote, "I'm not going to comment on the morality of . . ." and she didn't. I don't know where her head is.

Tom Orton wrote of one view of the present person—an actor—right or wrong, and made a sense.

In the case of the mother whose child was talking and was asked to leave as a cause of it—I can understand. I don't understand why she brought her color into it. A disturbance has no color.

Furthermore, I think this is all rather childish.

discrepancy

To the editor:

It appears that Mr. Otto's research of the judicial board hearing pertaining to the restrictions placed upon Bill Holland's campaign went only as far as his sight of Bellarmine's seventh floor.

HAD MR. OTTO proceeded further in his investigation, to talk with a member of the judicial board or someone who attended the hearing (which I did), he might have found out just what the board said—as opposed to what he would have liked to have it say.

The judicial board banned Mr. Holland from any campaigning, but when it was brought up about the signs in the windows of Bellarmine and their being on "private property," there appeared to be a discrepancy.

At the hearing Mr. Holland was told because of the signs being on private property, it became the choice of the student living there if she wanted it removed.

THIS WAS the ruling given to Mr. Holland by the judicial board as he left the hearing.

My only hope is that in the future Mr. Otto will research his complaints further so that he might be better aware of the total situation and not just what happens to satisfy himself.

official notice

Winter quarter grade reports will be mailed to home addresses March 21. Students who wish grades mailed elsewhere must leave a temporary address at the registrar's office before leaving campus. Forms will be provided; self-addressed envelopes are unnecessary.

Spring 1973 advance registration fee statements are to be mailed this week. Those who had completed advance registration between Feb. 15-23 and do not receive a tuition statement by March 14 should check with the controller's office.

Advance registered students who decide not to return for spring quarter are asked to notify the registrar's office by telephone or by returning registration documents marked cancelled before March 26.

Students who do not advance register will receive a spring quarter registration number along with their winter quarter grade report.

Degree applications for graduation in June 1973 will be accepted by the registrar's office through March.

Graduation fee ($20 Bachelor's, $45 Master's) is paid at the controller's office, where receipt is issued. Please bring the receipt to the registrar's office to obtain application forms.

AWS elections slated for today; all candidates run unopposed

Polling places for the AWS elections today are in the Chieftain, 10 a.m.-2 p.m., and in Bellarmine lobby, 10 a.m.-4 p.m.

Running unopposed are Linda Martin, president; Trini Dukes, vice president; and Kay Kindt, secretary-treasurer.

The AWS office needs to establish a valid position for itself believes Linda Martin, unopposed candidate for the AWS presidency.

Ms. Martin, a junior in public affairs, is concerned about the lack of recognition that the AWS has.

"STUDENTS disassociate it from the ASSU but they should realize that it has a function in itself," she said.

She would like to organize a "communication pattern" running through all women, and men as well. First priorities, though, should be given to the women, because of the type of organization the AWS is, Ms. Martin added.

She isn't sure what particular programs AWS can work on next year because she is waiting to see where the office will stand economically.

MS. MARTIN does, however, plan to follow in the steps of previous administrations and "follow the patterns established."

She feels her work last summer as director of the mayor's Pitch-in Information Center will be helpful as it placed her in a position of "leadership and responsibility."

Linda Martin

Trini Dukes

Deltrinee Dukes, unopposed candidate for the office of AWS vice president, believes that AWS "is a silent organization on campus that needs to be publicized."

Ms. Duke, a sophomore in community services, would like to make AWS a recognized participant organization on campus.

IT'S NOT a question of women's lib to think women can have responsibility and deal with responsibility," Ms. Dukes added.

Communication is the key word, she added, and believes that she can communicate easily with others.

SHE WOULD LIKE to see a "solid organization that continues to produce." The office needs a year to year program, that is "more than just a women's awareness week."

Ms. Dukes feels that she is qualified for the post because she is "interested and willing to make the effort."

She is president of the minority dorm council and feels that this experience has been beneficial.

Kay Kindt, unopposed candidate for secretary-treasurer, could not be reached for comment.

Williams' 52 powers Chiefs past Las Vegas

Greg Williams proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that he was still king of the basketball court in the Arena, when he brought home an astonishing 52 points against Las Vegas Friday night.

The big Senior center dominated the game from the opening tipoff, scoring 24 points in the first half and leading the Chiefs to their 100-86 triumph.

HIS PREVIOUS high for one game had been 40 in a game last year. By shooting in the 52, he became the third man in S.U. history to top the half-century mark.

After a short lead by Vegas in the opening minutes of the contest, the Chiefs pulled ahead to stay with a little sharp shooting by Frank Oleynick.

At the close of the half, the Chiefs led by a precarious 48-46 tally.

WITH THE opening tipoff of the second half, the Chiefs took firm command of the game and quickly sped to a 50-46 margin. A major factor here was Williams' record-breaking 13 consecutive field goals.

With 12:50 left to play, the senior had already racked up 34 points. By the time the clock read 5:20, he had broken his career high of 40.

After this, the game truly belonged to the Chiefs and especially to Greg, with a 91-79 lead and less than two minutes to go, the team could concentrate on getting him the ball and breaking the century mark.

BY VIRTUE of numerous assists by his teammates, Williams had 49 under his belt when he made the final shot to bring him over the 50 mark. An added foul shot boosted him to 52.

Lenzy Stuart was another outstanding performer on the floor, gaining only 2 points for himself, but leading the team with his passing and hustle.

Rod Derline brought up second behind Williams with 18 points.

Next in line was Oleynick's 16 points and his usual accurate feeds to the open man.

HIGH SCORER for the Vegas Rebels was Bob Florence with 27.

In turnovers, usually the Chiefs' weakest department, the Rebels turned over 16 to the Chief's 11.

The win brought the Chiefs' season record to an even 13-13 split and 6-8 in league play.

Swim team forming now

A competitive swim team is being formed by S.U.

The team will be composed of both men and women students, and, according to Senior Jim Sarro who is recruiting students, there has been "a fair amount of interest shown already."

Team competition will begin with small schools but Sarro hopes the team will eventually work up to NCAA competition.

Plans include workouts beginning next quarter with competition to begin fall quarter. Interested students may call Jim Sarro at 626-6361 or the Connolly P.E. Center, 626-5860.

LENZY STUART, right, saw the last minutes of his last game in a Chieftain uniform from the bench. He fouled out late in the second half, having accumulated only two points but hustling all the way.

CHIEFTAIN CORNER

by Pete Caw

If somebody sitting next to me Friday night had not said otherwise, I might have gone away from the S.U.-Las Vegas game thinking that that was the famous Elgin Baylor on the court in jersey No. 54.

But someone did tell me differently. They said it was Greg Williams and now I believe it, but I still find that 52-point statistic hard to grasp. So does Greg, I'm sure.

THERE'S NO GETTING AROUND this one, the big senior was just fantastic. He couldn't do anything wrong from the time he stepped into the game.

Some time into the first half, that same person who identified Greg predicted he'd have a "hell of a game."

That was easy to see by then, as he had already surpassed his 17 point per game average.

BY THE TIME I got my halftime stats straight, there was a big 24 staring out from under Greg's point column. That set the stage for his second half performance and undoubtedly the most exciting game in recent S.U. history.

I think that Greg could have gone one on one with Pepperdine's "Bird" Averitt that night and come out ahead.

The only way he came out behind against Vegas was in the tender condition of his posterior after all the slapping by Chieftains and fans alike.

NOW, IF A LITTLE reminiscence could be permitted here let's go back over the season and what sticks in this reporter's mind the most.

The Chiefs opened their season with a surprising win against nationally-ranked Houston University, only to slide under later to quite a few lesser opponents. The season was pretty dull until Greg Williams brought 34 points out of a home game with Dayton University.

The Chiefs then played fairly well in the Lobo Invitational in New Mexico.

They received a good lashing from the San Francisco and Santa Clara teams.

THEN CAME A LANDMARK in the season, in a game at Reno. Coach O'Connor put in a freshman named Frank Oleynick and the young guard performed as you've never seen a freshman do before. After that, it was Frank the Freshman who started over some of his upperclassman teammates.

With quick moves and frequent after-shot body English, the freshman endeared himself to both the fans and the scoreboard.

With the resignation of the Gross brothers, the Chiefs suffered somewhat of a cruel blow to their collective confidence, but managed to come back fairly well in the final round of games.

A FAMILIAR PICTURE in the past has been Rod "Rifle" Derline, with his long shots and pinpoint accuracy. This season was no exception, as he continued to shoot the bottom out of the basket. About mid-season, he lost his feel or got his sights misaligned, but soon came back to his old habits.

If someone were to ask about unselfish leadership on the court, Lenzy Stuart was it. The senior was a major factor in herding his team to any good performance, often at the sacrifice of his own individual statistics.

There's a man with a real command of the game. AND, OF COURSE, who could forget the ever-present hustle of Ron Howard. You didn't even have to watch the action to know how the game was going with Ron at his forward spot. Just watch his facial expressions of agony, exhilaration or frustration.

I think it was Coach O'Connor who called him "100% effort 100% of the time."

It couldn't have been said any better. WELL, THAT'S IT on the basketball court for another year.

Next year looks promising, all except for Williams' center spot. That's a hard act to follow.

Perhaps if Frank could grow a few inches . . .

BSU takes women's title

by Evie Pech

Boasting an impressive 4-1 season record, the women of the BSU have captured the women's intramural basketball championship.

Leading the BSU in scoring this season was Rita Bruce with 23 points.

Four other BSU players pulled through the season with double-figure scoring.

BONNIE SIMMS put in 18, Mary Jean Harrison came up with 15, Felecia Greene dumped in 14 and Maxine McCray added 10.

Women's intramural basketball is primarily a defensive game, basically because most team members haven't shot a basketball since high school. This emphasis on defense explains the low tallies in scoring.

The team effectively employed a tight zone defense unless they came up against an opponent with good outside shooters.

REGARDLESS of the game situation, the women of the BSU team accumulated an insignificant number of personal fouls. Either the team members avoided aggressive physical contact, or they were extremely well-versed in the art of being inconspicuous.

At any rate, the greatest number of personal fouls were attributed to Rita Bruce and Sheila Garrett. Both women were charged with a total of six.

Next season, the BSU women will be back, so watch out, women athletes of S.U.

Illegal parking and speeding during the evenings have become problems on campus, according to Sgt. Jack Brown of the campus security force.

All malls and 10th and 11th Street by the A. A. Lemieux Library are off limits to parking except in special circumstances, Sgt. Brown explained. This restriction applies day or night, he added.

The problem has mainly been with the night classes, Sgt. Brown noted.

"Fr. Gaffney (University president) is especially interested in seeing this enforced," Sgt. Brown added.

homecoming pictures available

Remember how great you looked when you had your pictures taken for the Homecoming Ball?

Well, if you don't, there's no need to fret. Those very same photographs are now available in the office of the dean of women, second floor Chieftain.

The office is open daily from 9 a.m.-4 p.m.

note cards found

Somebody having a tough time writing his term paper without his trusty pink note cards?

A pack of these note cards remained when everyone had left Pigott Auditorium two Saturdays ago after the ASSU-sponsored movie.

The subject is the philosophy of non-violence with references to Shelley.

If these cards sound familiar, they may be claimed at the ASSU office, second floor Chieftain.

Rochelle Creegan to join Army

by Jim Hillson

Rochelle Creegan, of the counseling and testing center, will leave S.U. to accept a commission as first lieutenant in the U.S. Army.

She will report to Fort McClellan, Alabama, on April 1 for a three month orientation.

Ms. Creegan earned a B. A. in education and history from S.U. in 1969. In 1970 she earned a masters degree in Latin American History.

"I WAS eligible for a direct appointment because I was a college graduate. Before May of 1972 the Army would not give commissions to women with dependents. When the ban was lifted last May I applied for an appointment," explained Ms. Creegan.

She will be one of the first women with a child to join up.

Ms. Creegan also receives the rank of first lieutenant rather than second lieutenant usually awarded to beginners.

SHE EXPLAINED that, "I was able to become a first lieutenant because of my leadership background and work experience."

Besides her duties in Counseling and Testing, which involves interviewing clients and administering and scoring tests, she has assisted Dr. Thomas Downey, of history, with his teaching duties.

"I make out the exams for all his classes, correct them, and give each student in the class a grade," she said.

MS. CREEGAN also worked as office manager for Dr. Joseph Page, associate dean of physical education, for two and one-half years.

"I hope I can use my background in history to enter into military intelligence," said Ms. Creegan.

She explained that she does not know exactly where her first active duty station will be, but anticipates that it will be in Latin America.

Her 12-year old son, Michael, will join her at her first duty station.

Looking for a change

A new academic calendar in sight?

Should S.U. adopt a new academic calendar which would include two terms of four months and a one month interim session?

Fr. James, Powers, S.J., English; Fr. Eugene Healy, S.J., biology; and Fr. Francis Woods, S.J., engineering, debated the question Friday during the winter quarter faculty meeting.

THE 4-1-4 PROPOSAL, as it is commonly called, has been adopted by 89 schools over the last few years, including the University of Puget Sound and Pacific Lutheran University.

Fall and spring terms are like traditional semesters. Students take three or four classes which meet three or four times a week. The interim session emphasizes a single topic, unrestricted by class sessions.

The U.P.S. admissions brochure describes the session as a "valuable academic change of pace which contributes an added dimension to (the students) learning experience."

"INVOLVEMENT, participation, experimentation and continuity are watchwords for the Winterim experience," the brochure adds.

The semester system is undoubtedly the most popular in this country, Fr. Powers said, arguing for the proposal.

Over 1300 schools are on the semester system as opposed to 580 on the quarter system.

The semester system has the definite advantage of finishing up to three weeks earlier and still offers as many or more courses, Fr. Powers said.

"EXTENDING THE term to 14 or 16 weeks seems to have advantages for the student in many ways," he added. "It allows the students to catch his breath, to reflect, to have recourse to the library and to have recourse to advice."

In addition, revising the calendar to 4-1-4, or semesters, would take the University "out of the shadow" of the U.W., he said.

Interim courses emphasize concentration, Fr. Powers said.

The P.L.U. catalogue points out some of the options: "innovative seminars, foreign studies in Central America, Europe and Asia, interdepartmental offerings, area off-campus studies and exchange programs with other interim institutions."

The interim lends itself to more industry on the part of the student, Fr. Powers said.

In objecting to the change,

Fr. Healy pointed out that two 13-week sessions would cut down the number of hours per week in the classroom.

IF THE student is going on to a professional school, he added, a greatly reduced number of school days will not satisfy the requirements.

The 4-1-4 proposal is being adopted mainly in small liberal arts colleges, Fr. Woods said in his argument against the change.

In the areas of business and science, however, the benefits derived are dubious, he added.

"These areas are compelled to meet the competition of the marketplace. They don't have time for free-wheeling," he said.

THE STRENGTH of the quarter system is that it "eliminates lame duck sessions and consequent piling up in others," Fr. Woods added.

In addition, the geographic area is saturated with community colleges who are on the quarter system, Fr. Woods pointed out.

"We can't be indifferent to that. I feel that the proposal would lose us students," he said.

It would also "play havoc" with the graduate programs, he added.
